

Women in Lockdown Project:
Questions to explore in recordings/written accounts

Below, you'll find a list of questions and discussions prompts to help you in your recording/written account of your experience of lockdown. You may choose to use all or some of the prompts below, or you may wish to discuss the thoughts that come into your head. We're eager to document a wide range of experiences; as such, the below questions are intended only as a guide to get you thinking.

- Tell us about your experiences of lockdown. How has it been for you?
- How have you been spending your time during the pandemic?
- What changes have you made in the way you communicate with the people around you during lockdown?
- Do you think there have been added pressures on women during lockdown and if so how has this impacted you?
- Have you taken on additional care responsibilities since the beginning of Covid?
 - If so, how have you managed this alongside your existing workloads?
- How have your experiences of feminism been affected during lockdown?
- Has anything differed in the way you challenge sexism at home, at work or in the community during lockdown?
- Have periods of lockdown had any impact on your plans for the future?
- How has your perspective shifted since lockdown began? Has the pandemic changed your feminism?
- Have you been able to continue engaging in activities and activism around your feminism (e.g. meeting collectively) throughout lockdown? If so, how have you adapted?
- How do you think the Government has handled the pandemic?
- Do you think that the lack of women in public office has led to a neglect of women's issues during the pandemic?
